PAPERS.
Mr. BURNS laid on the table former returns relative to expenditure of the present Government.
Mr. STUART said on the table the annual report of the Colonial Secretary received from the managers of the Australasian.
DETENTION IN QUARANTINE.
Mr. BUCHANAN drew attention to the circumstances of two gentlemen—Mr. Mc. Kewson and the other Mr. Balfey, who were taken to quarantine in Sydney by the steamship Brisbane, and placed in quarantine by the steamship Albatross. They had been five weeks there; the quarantine authorities had been told that they were still detained. Mr. Balfey came here from Japan, and was taken to a house and furnished it was settling when he and his wife and family were taken away to the quarantine station. They were going to ruin. They were taken through the streets in charge of a detective and placed in a police station, and they were kept there for a fortnight. They complained bitterly of this treatment, and talked of action against the Government.
Mr. CAMERON said similar representations had been made to him.
Mr. STUART said he was not aware of the circumstances which the hon. member stated, as to any indignity being offered to persons in quarantine. They were taken into quarantine. He would, however, ask the hon. member the instructions given, were that accommodation should be given consistent with the necessity of keeping the persons liable to be attacked away from the general community. With regard to the non-release of the persons mentioned, there were some persons—he did not know how many—still detained quarantine for the reason that the health-officers were not satisfied that they were really free from the disease. There were peculiar circumstances in connection with their case which the Health-officer said compelled him to keep them in quarantine longer than for two or three days in quarantine longer than others.

MATRIMONIAL CAUSES (ACT OF AMENDMENT)

BILL.

On the motion of Mr. BUCHANAN, the Matrimonial Causes Amendment Bill was read a third time, passed, and transmitted to the Legislative Council.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

Mr. SPEAKER read a message from his Excellency the Governor, recommending that provision be made for defraying out of the Consolidated Fund the salaries and allowances of various departments and services of the colony for the month of January, and for an advance to the Colonial Treasurer of £600,000 for the year ending March 31st.

It was ordered that the message be printed and referred to a committee of Supply.

THE COLONIAL SUPPLY BILL.

Mr. STUART moved—"That the Standing Orders be suspended as would preclude the passing of a bill, intimated 'A Bill to apply certain sums out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the year 1877, the New South Wales towards the Colonies'."

He said he would also preclude the resolutions of the Committee of Supply and of Ways and Means respectively, relating to the proposed appropriation of the sum of £242,500 for the services of the year 1877, which are being received on the same day on which they are come to be considered by committees respectively." He said that the proposal was to appropriate a proportionate sum for one month's services, and that it would be voted in the usual manner for the departments and services of the colony, and that in addition thereto there would be voted in the bill the sum of £242,500 in interest amounting to £100,000 to cover the expenses of the roads under construction and the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges, and the payment of the amounts for 1877. The amount appropriated for the roads and bridges for the year 1876 was £346,902; the amount to defray the services of the departments £242,500, and for the Treasurer's advance account, £60,000. He said that if the Government were to make such a vote as would have been better, perhaps, under temporary circumstances they could avoid having to pass these temporary measures every year, by year by year they seemed to have inflicted upon a public body a very heavy and practically impossible to carry the Estimates through before the close of the first month of the year. If the resolution were agreed to be passed, it would mean that the bill would be introduced at the evening, after he had made the financial statement.

Mr. PIDDINGTON said he did not gather from the Treasurer's remarks what was the total amount of the items included in the bill, and reckoned it at about £48,000.

Mr. STUART said the bill intimated £242,500 for the roads and bridges generally, and £60,000 for the Treasurer's advance account; £16,020 for roads and bridges; £300,972 for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges generally; making a total of £469,492.

Mr. PIDDINGTON said he had no objection to the now proposed by the Government in including the sum which would be necessary for the maintenance of roads, but he thought it would have become explanation in regard to the $500,000 for roads and bridges generally. DID it include the estimate for the Estimates for new bridges, or merely the estimate already made for the maintenance of bridges, was his objection; but if the former, he thought the House would surrender a great portion of its rights if it consented to it.

MR. STUART said that no new bridges were included in the vote.

MR. LITTLETON wished to know whether the bill included the salaries for the new appointments made by the Government since the last Estimates were passed.

MR. COHEN suggested to the Colonial Treasurer that the Government should make it a device to take up the temporary supply bill. A great deal of delay in the Government was frequently caused through these lapses now not being re-voted until the Appropriation Act was passed, and not until the Government had time to consider it. He did not say that there could be any objection to including them in the supply bill. It would greatly facilitate the carrying on of the Government.

MR. LLOYD said that temporary supply bills were extremely objectionable, but the constant practice of suspending the passing of orders ought to be put a stop to. (Hear, hear.)

No Government business could be done without the passing of these temporary supply bills as the present Government. Last session they passed seven, and it seemed probable that this session they would pass eight or nine. He was in the opinion of the standing order ought only to be consented to in cases of necessity. But there would have been no necessity in this case had the Government not allowed the House to throw the bill back. He would have brought forward the bill in the regular way. He, the Colonial Treasurer, might have given notice of the bill at any time, and it would have been passed at the end of February, and then have brought in a bill for the surplus time for the House to consider it. But now they were asked to pass a bill, scarcely knowing what it contained, and he thought it would be better to let the Government carry on the system of introducing temporary supply bills, and they would introduce them in time to allow hon. members to discuss them. He thought it would be better to make it advisable to make the next bill include three or four months' supply instead of one.

MR. PARKES said that before the motion was put he had been asked to move that the bill be taken into consideration at once, upon a much higher ground than had been indicated. They were not asked to agree to a temporary bill upon ordinary circumstances; but upon extraordinary circumstances, and so far as his knowledge went, in the Australian colonies. They had a Government which was elected by the people, and a House of Representatives elected by the people. The financial year of this colony terminated on the 31st December. For the first time in this colony, and in this part of the world the expenditure of the Government was under the control of the House of Representatives. They were now twenty-four days after the termination of the financial year. They had no budget speech and no estimate to make, but not a single effort to bring the management of the financial affairs of the country within the ordinary time. Parliament was prorogued on the 24th of August, and did any one mean to tell him that the Government was not responsible to the people in the ordinary terms of the session. What possible excuse could exist for the present rulers of this colony, who were not responsible to the people, not having made an explanation of the country's affairs. They had been in office two years. They came in with a promise to reform the Government, and yet they had not the exercise of their ability, they had brought us to this position. The House was asked to suspend the standing orders to cover this blunder—this culpable neglect on the part of the Government. The House suspended the standing orders unless a case of necessity was made out. What case of necessity was made out? The House was asked to suspend the standing orders on 1st November, the last time to have the financial affairs of the country explained before the year terminated—so that at least they might then have an opportunity to explain the management of their financial position. It is a pity that the House were found there when they would do the most important thing in the world, and that they were not there. It was an insult to their intelligence, it was trampling upon their rights, and it was a bare-faced attempt to ask them to cover the bungling and neglect of a dishonest and inefficient Government.

Mr. STUART said, in reply to the objection of the hon. member for the Upper House, that the first clause in the bill was that "whereby the House of Representatives may be enabled to make any such reduction that might be made in the present year." Of course if the hon. gentleman asked any objection to a salary, it would be in his power to make it. He would not have the right to make a salary, of course, the item would be struck out, and no salary would be voted. With regard to the suggestion of the hon. member for the Upper House, that the Government to ask the House shortly to agree to such an amendment of the Audit Act as would obviate the necessity of having these budget votes re-voted. His hope he would not have. He would not have the House agree to such an amendment of the bill was to provide that anything

Mr. STUART's reference to 1871-1872 can hardly be said to have been fortunate. A temporary supply bill preceded the financial statement of the MARTIN Ministry, which was made on the 6th December, 1871. A vote of credit for four months preceded the financial statement of the PARKES Ministry.
